HARD-TO-COUNT COMMUNITIES IN DELAWARE'S CONGRESSIONAL DISTRICT

In the most recent decennial census in 2010, 80% of this district's households mailed back their questionnaire, requiring more costly and difficult in-person follow up from the Census Bureau to count the remaining 20% (based on tracts from 2010 in the district's current boundaries).

Based on the latest census estimates, approximately 13% of the district's current population (122,800 people) lives in hard-to-count neighborhoods, shaded in light orange to dark red on the map. These are census tracts where almost a quarter or more households did not mail in their census questionnaire in 2010. Without greater self-response in these and other neighborhoods, households could be missed in the 2020 census, putting a fair and accurate count in jeopardy for this Congressional District.

In 2020, for the first time the Census Bureau will be urging most households to submit their census responses online via the Internet. In 2016, 16.4% of this District's households had either no Internet subscriptions or dial up-only access, according to the latest American Community Survey estimates.
